However, you want the best of the best. One answer that will give you that answer is someone who really reads them, crazy! I want to make sure you're getting the best book if you're starting. The question is whether you will be making salames. At first, I used these books to find out the intricacies. Now, after many years, all this knowledge begins to overlap a little by the topics a little. They are great recipes of sausage and meat cure of Rytek Kutas. The best book for fresh, fermented, emulsified or dried sausage and meats. That's the short answer. Now, a little more details about these books, why I consider "theses best'! Sausage and salami - it's my passion! The book of Marianski shows all the science behind dried meats, semi-dry cured and all the other variations of cured meats that the Western world has never heard. In addition it covers the ham in many details, they didn't just write about the amazing ideas of Eastern Europe, they also explored some Asian and African cultures for salami and fresh sausages where this exotic mix gives a new layer of flavor ideas. There is a section in this book that I have not seen covered anywhere else, which is hot smoke. in all the people of the United States is a little shy of this technique, since you are working within the danger zone of bacterial growth – temperature somewhere between 60°F\15°C to 100 and 140°F\60°C. there is less bacterial growth at this temperature when you can heat smoke in inzone - if the process is accurate. Anyway, for someone who is doing all the healing of muscle meat, fresh sausages and smoking tons of different meats for 15 years - learning about a new area like hot smoke, is quite phenomenal. Then any book works, go get them! Thank you for passionate about curing meat for about 20 years now. Having been lucky to learn inside fine dining kitchens through to share my passion online. My insatiable appetite and passion toward the classic Italian salumi cured dry and all forms of healing and smoking are what drives this site engine.
